

Sherry Maysonave

An acknowledged expert in nonverbal communication, Sherry Maysonave is an acclaimed motivational speaker and award-winning author.

Passionate about helping others achieve success, Sherry is the founder and president of Empowerment Enterprises, LLC and Empowerment Productions, LLC. Her clients include business professionals as well as nationally-known political figures and entertainers. Corporate clients include U.S. and international companies in technology, finance, fashion, law, energy, pharmaceutical, and professional services.

Sherry has been interviewed by more than 200 TV, Radio, and print publications across the U.S., Canada, and Europe. She has made multiple appearances on NBC's Today and has been featured in USA Today, Financial Times, The Wall Street Journal, New Yorker, InStyle, and BusinessWeek.

Sherry's most recent book, The Girl Who Could Read Hearts, was inspired by a vivid dream starring one of her deceased sisters. The segments of this story that explore death and the afterlife are based upon Sherry's real-life experiences when she was present with beloved family members as they passed away. Her wondrous encounters of loved ones' spirits after their physical deaths are deeply engaging. Sherry says she doesn't just believe there is an afterlife. She knows there is.

The Girl Who Could Read Hearts has won six awards for inspirational fiction and spiritual fiction. Her book, Casual Power – How to Power Up Your Nonverbal Communication and Dress Down for Success, quickly became, and remains today, an Amazon category best-seller. She is the author and producer of the DVD series, Brand a Positive Business Image. Sherry's first children's book—EggMania: Where's the Egg in Exactly?—has won five awards.
